

Crash Carnival April 7

By HERBIE KENT
(only foolin')

Saint Joseph's biggest weekend of the semester is about to unfold upon Pumas of all ages as the running of the Little 500 race is set for Apr. 7.

All the thrills and spills of Indianapolis, pomp and parades of Ontario and the safe, courteous driving of Daytona will be missing as spectators will settle for all the beer and sun they can get this weekend in Puma-ville.

Festivities will begin Friday night with a Little 500 Dance Festival featuring Demolition Danny and the Ambulance Chasers. Immediately following the dance festival, a mass will be celebrated in the chapel for all the drivers and their pit crews (just in case).

Early Saturday morning, the drivers will meet to view the movie Gumball Rally prior to a lecture on sportsmanship and safe driving to be delivered by Donnie Allison and Cale Yarborough.

As the crowd awaits the start of the race they will be entertained by a former SA president doing his impression of former U.S. president Richard M. Nixon.

After the race has started, Pumas will begin an age-old tradition that has long been associated with Little 500, namely emptying every keg, bottle and can of beer in sight before the race is over.

As the attention of the crowd drifts back to the race, the fans will notice that there have been several rule changes in an effort to add excitement and test the driver's road skills.

Half of the drivers will start in a clockwise motion around the track while the remaining drivers race in a counterclockwise direction. At the halfway mark in the race, the drivers will change directions while the faculty amuses the spectators with their jelly doughnut-spitting contest to take place at the south end of the infield.

In order to add a dimension of creativity to the kart designs this year, the use of wheels on the karts has been outlawed.

One final rule added this year is that a kart will advance three positions in the final standings for each pedestrian it can knock to the ground, track marshals and race officials excluded.

Immediately following the race, all are invited to adjourn to the cafeteria to sample the culinary catastrophes of Jim Novak and the Saint Joseph food service. Preceding dinner there will be a memorial mass in the chapel at 7:30 p.m., if necessary.

Part two of the Little 500 dance festival has been cancelled Saturday night in favor of a Dean Martin roast, to be televised live from the college auditorium. The man of the hour will be selected a half hour before the show is to begin, from a panel of candidates. The panel includes G. Robert Kasky, Rev. Charles Banet, Mark Behnke, Jim Novak and Reginald Pulliam.

Sunday has been officially declared a "Hangover Holiday" and will also mark the conclusion of the Little 500 Weekend. Breakfast will be served from 2-3:30 p.m., with the menu consisting of oatmeal, jelly doughnuts, scrambled eggs with ketchup, chocolate milk and hash brown potatoes.

Crummy Courses Curdle Curriculum

By DLANIGER MAILLUP
(only foolin')

At a recent academic council meeting, Fr. Chuckie Ribbon announced the new course listings for the fall semester of the 1979-80 school year. They include:

CORE IX-INEBRIATION ETIQUETTE: The Drunk Man's Guide to Proper Drinking (AA Representative to be announced) Unlimited hours.

Major emphasis will be placed on incorporating behavior control techniques to stimulate gluttonous drinking. Skinnerian techniques employed will seek to reinforce excessive and social drinking. Course will develop the following techniques: slurping graciously, inconspicuous belching, ventriloquism (how to throw your hiccups) and singing while wasted (barbershop quartet style).

JOURNALISM 1 - No Account Ethics: An Asymptomatic Approach (A blond from Ohio and a brunet from Valparaiso) No Credit.

Course involves a systematic and comprehensive study of ways to totally destroy student readership. Included will be such topics as: "How to Belligerently Discredit the Entire Student Body", "Libel Made Easy", and "Pre-School Writing" (includes spelling for the very, very young; how to write for grown-ups when you know you're only a kid and conscientiously babble... how to say absolutely nothing... but say it well.) In addition, the course will require that each student spy on at least one professor and gather no less than ten bits of incriminating information. Successful completion of the course qualifies students for a position on the underground newspaper, which cannot be named, as it is a four-letter word.

PHILOSOPHY 40-Meditation Puma Style (Don Brinley) 3 hours.

Course seeks to provide the student with a means of screening out potential noxious stimuli such as Core lectures, homework assignments and test materials. Of particular concern will be the following altered states of consciousness: sleep, hypnagogic reverie (day-dreaming) and comatosis. A once-a-week practicum will be offered on "eye exercises". This will involve various techniques that eastern mystics have developed which will unconsciously allow you to keep those weary eyes open, even at the most boring of lectures.

PSYCHOLOGY 51 - Personalized Instruction in Psychopharmacology (Dr. Janet Snizek) 4 hours.

Course entails an intensive and extensive study of the campus "head". Covered will be the finer techniques of skin popping, shotgunning and coke sniffing. Attempts will be made to conduct a longitudinal study of the average American head and from this group draw glaring generalizations.

PSYCHOLOGY 15-A Psychoanalytic Profile of Popeye the Sailor Man (Dr. James Kenny, Mr. Lawrence Lennon and Fr. John Pichitino) 3 hours.

Course will attempt to undertake an in-depth approach at analyzing the dynamics involved in the psyche of Popeye. Of extreme importance will be to determine Popeye's psychosexual development in view of his very much-extended relationship with Olive Oyl. It has been hypothesized that Popeye is suffering from deeply-seated feelings of sexual inadequacy. In addition, the course will cover the apparent love-hate relationship between Popeye and Bluto.

SOCIOLOGY 42-Campus Ghetto Studies (Dr. Patricia Robinson and Ronald Boland) 3 hours.

An upper-level course geared towards identifying and analyzing the various campus ghettos, paying particular attention to the underlying factors contributing to their demise. A tentative list of on-sight locations has been released. They include: Merlini, Seifert and certain sections of Gallagher. Questions to be discussed are: What entails a ghetto? Does it take just one joint to get the entire dorm to light up? The aesthetic value of toilet paper intricately laced on trees and up-and-down hallways (are there any?). What type of students flock to a ghetto?

Trash Can Survey Kills STUFF

By DLANIGER MAILLUP
(only foolin')

As of Apr. 1, STUFF, the newspaper of the Saint Joseph's College community, was declared defunct.

After much ballyhooing and brown-nosing, Clark Kentke, Student Association president, convinced the top "heads" of state that STUFF contributed little in the way of disseminating accurate, unbiased and up-to-date information to the student body.

Kentke hypothesized that due to the boring and uninformative nature of STUFF, no one would bother to read it.

Setting out to test his hypothesis, Kentke utilized the most advanced techniques in research methods.

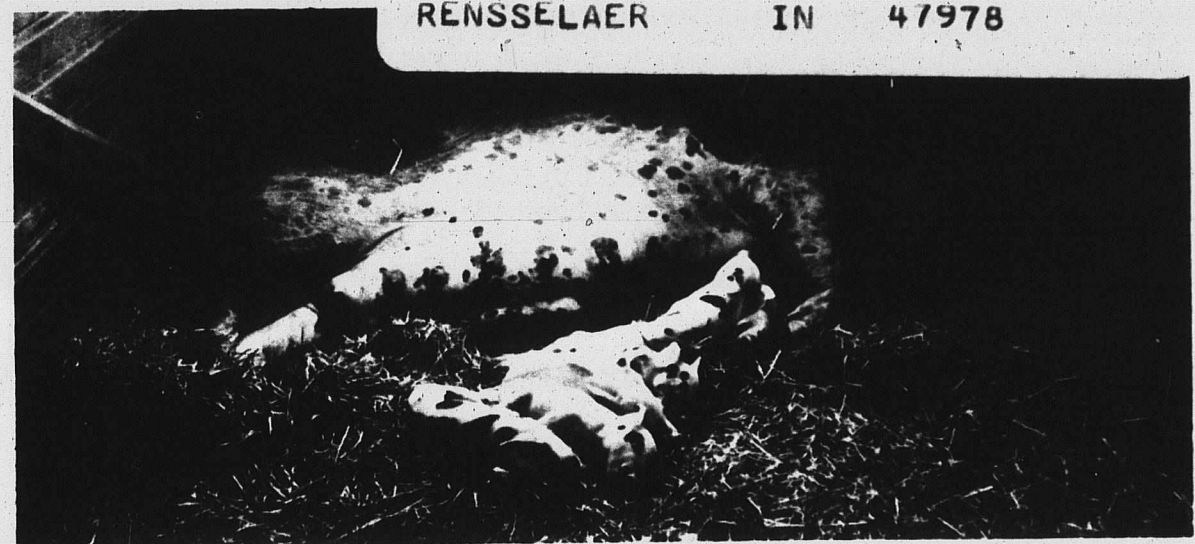

"I call it garbage picking. It's a very simple method, so simple, in fact, that a child of two could do it. I simply stand by the trash can in the post office and wait for students to throw their STUFFs away after reading them. I then collect them all as proof-positive that no one reads STUFF," remarks Kentke.

"In addition, I collect the papers of my best buddies and include them in this total. By doing this, I have more STUFFs to present as unadulterated evidence that no one reads this trashy material."

According to Kentke, an underground newspaper would best serve the interests of the student body and himself. "Why, with an underground newspaper, I'd get the chance to censor any and all things detrimental to the Student Association and myself. But even more important, I would be able to utilize the paper as strictly a public relations arm for the SA officers. Just think how my image could grow in splendor," confides Kentke.

STUFF will lie in state in the Office of Public Information, Halleck third.

Plumb tuckered out is the word to describe these Pumas following a 45-minute Core lecture.

Vol. 42 Rensselaer, Indiana, Thursday, April 5, 1979 No. 13

Does your typical evening meal in Halleck Center's ptomaine palace have that recycled taste lately? Well, Pumas, never let it be said that anything goes to waste. When you have pork around here, you eat everything but the squeal. And when you fork down Thursday's leftovers on Friday, you're finishing off the bottom of the pail. Here an anxious Puma wolfs down goodies served by an energetic cafeteria assistant.

Pledge Of Iniquity

(only foolin')

It has been said by a "few" that the students of our illustrious college "have never been consulted concerning the management of SNUFF", that our philosophy or credo is basically unknown to the greater part of the student body.

If this is true, then we at SNUFF would like to take this time to offer our most sincere and humble apologies.

Throughout the course of the semester, we have found ourselves entangled in many promising but elusive stories. What started out as a seemingly lucrative prospect, ended up on dead-end row.

In the process of tracking down the most evasive of individuals, we, unfortunately, lost sight of our number one obligation, to keep the public accurately informed.

For this oversight, we are truly sorry. So, in order that we may rectify our wrong, as well as pacify the "few", we at SNUFF would like to present to you our pledge. It is in this pledge that you will gain sight of our principles.

I pledge allegiance to the SNUFF of Saint Joseph's College in Rensselaer;
And to the autocracy for which it upholds;
One dictator, under Amin;
With servitude and iniquity for all.

And why was there a hole to fill?

First off...the STUFF staff reporters are currently picketing the paper. And why are they picketing? Well, for one thing, they felt that $5 per semester was tantamount to slave labor.

Secondly, they were fed up with having to take orders from a man who insists upon being called IDI AMIN.

Moreover, they have expressed a concern over being handed an assignment the day before it is due. And even more important, they are somewhat miffed and vexed at being subjected to daily lashings of the tongue and whip.

Dear Editor,

During my time, which of course to you people is ancient, the collegian was an individual who was the very quintessence of creativity and resourcefulness.

We prided ourselves in having the ability to "turn a phrase" with remarkable facility. If there was a course we wanted to take or a "cake" professor that was sought, never did we offer dull and unimaginative excuses.

Whenever we implored the registrar to bear with us...our rendition of what would normally be a trite and hackneyed story was so believable that the registrar was hard put to hold back the tears.

I took this job in an effort to escape the boring and listless life of a rag-time jazz musician. I need action. I need activities that present themselves as being potentially stimulating.

But in all of these years my only rewarding experience has been in denying students access to a particular course or "prof".

Don't you students realize that I am tired of making paper airplanes out of your silly transcripts? I am tired of misrecording your grades in an effort to tone down grade inflation. I am tired of sitting in my office day in and day out with only my typewriter and muppet dolls to talk to.

In short, if you are going to lie...lie big...and lie eloquently. Utilize what the Almighty has given you and what we at Saint Joe's have tried to nurture and develop. Yes, utilize that gift of creative lying.

Sincerely,
Your Registrar

One of the most difficult tasks for SNUFF editor-in-chief Idi Amin is getting his staff to get their stories in before appointed deadlines. Here Collegeville's answer to Joseph Pulitzer hammers home a few points of journalism to a recalcitrant group of staffers.

boss-man and editor-in-chief, Reggie Pulliam, alias, IDI AMIN.

All of this has resulted in a noticeable shortage of reporters and writers. Pulliam was advised to contact one SHAH OF IRAN, as it's reported that he was last seen on an employment line in Harlem, New York.

So, in view of the foregoing events, STUFF was unable to bring to you the best in journalistic writing.

Warped Point Of View

Who Needs Silverware For Bat Bellies?

By HERBIE KENT
(only foolin')

Students express outrage and furor each year when increases in tuition and room and board are announced but very few ever mention the scandalous costs and unnecessary waste within the food service budget.

Outlandish luxuries have skyrocketed costs beyond belief. For starters, the food service could do away with glasses and have the students bring their own to the cafeteria if they are thirsty.

Another abhorrently affluent atrocity is the use of a dishwasher. Why wash the dishes? All that is ever washed off of them is the uneaten food of other students. This is a blatant waste of food, not to mention the costs of the soap, water, electricity and employees required to operate it.

Still yet another unneeded cost arises from using both plates and trays. Why do we need both of them? Cannot students carry their plates by themselves without the help of trays?

Why use silverware? God gave us hands which are very versatile and can be used to eat with; silverware is an absolute luxury. Fine, elegant silverware is very expensive and the cheap stuff they use in the cafeteria costs a small fortune as well.

Another method to cut food costs substantially would be to order lesser quality of food. Top-quality food costs a bundle and the rubber and plastic imitations the cafeteria uses costs almost as much.

One solution would be to order more exotic and less popular types of food since it would be cheaper. Such examples would be pickled penguin wings, elephant ear steaks, aardvark snout, barbequed bat bellies and rhino rump which would add variety to the meals and keep students talking about the food, maybe.

Another viable alternative would be the use of synthetic, texturized protein called "Protein Playdo." It does not need to be cooked, heated or seasoned. To prepare it for consumption, one merely shapes it into the desired form, then adds the artificial coloring and flavoring if desired.

Hopefully, with the recent resignation of Jim Novak, the food service will be able to cut some of these absurd and superfluous expenses.

Pumas Welcome Woody To Sidelines

By WALDO SNODGRASS
(only foolin')

Woody Hayes named the new athletic director of Saint Joseph's College? Yep, Puma sports fans, that's the first in a whole air sickness bag full of athletic department news bulletins this April Fool's edition holds for you.

Students returning next fall may have a hard time recognizing some of the developments, but one they can't miss is good ol' Woody tromping up and down the sidelines in the fall as he handles his other newly-established responsibility of head football coach.

Woody promises Puma football fans that an exciting season lies ahead and that he brings several unique advantages to the SJC gridiron. First, opponents will not dare intercept a Puma pass, lest they be run out of bounds in front of the Puma bench and have to explain their athletic indiscretion to Woody.

Second, game officials will carefully avoid calling penalties against SJC, since they do not wish to have the sideline markers torn up, the scoreboard set afire or to have sideline photographers' cameras hurled onto the playing field. Lastly, if the Pumas should lose a game, the media will not divulge such a secret and post-game press conferences will be cancelled in interests of peace.

Woody's athletic directorship comes as a one-year appointment. To make room for him, current athletic director Richard Scharf will be on an all-expense-paid one-year sabbatical during which he will join the PGA men's tour to pick up pointers from the professionals that he will subsequently pass along to the Puma golf squad.

In addition, Scharf will conduct research on an essay he will deliver next fall to Core VII on that well-known PGA golf principle: "Never let your game interfere with your score." To make room for Hayes on the gridiron, the current football coaching staff will be on a no-expense-paid sabbatical to the famed Ronald McDonald School of Remedial Football Coaching in Tubbs Corner, Iowa.

Success for winning coaches also brings its proper rewards, even if the coach involved objects to those rewards. Such is the case in men's basketball, where SJC head man George Waggoner has been named a part-time advisor to the basketball teams at UCLA and the University of Miami.

Stipulations of the agreement are that Waggoner will coach the Pumas next winter except on days when Indiana blizzards rake our neighboring cornfields. On those dates, he will be dispatched to UCLA and Miami, and he doesn't like it a bit.

"Can you imagine me having to leave our lovely Indiana weather in January and be sent to places like Los Angeles and Miami?" he challenges. "Why, it's a terrible injustice to the human spirit! Moreover, I'm told that the movies on my plane flights will consist primarily of 'Ma and Pa Kettle' re-runs. Boy, am I going to miss our January weather!"

Head tennis coach Father Ambrose Ruschau continues as head coach of men's and women's tennis, but he has accepted additional duties as protocol advisor to tennis pro Ilie Nastase, whose temperament rivals that of a typhoid germ. Father Ruschau is confident that Nastase will follow his advice and clean up his court manners, however, because Father Philip Gilbert will accompany him on the pro tennis tour and take away Nastase's ID card if he behaves improperly.

Following much heavy-handed pressure, volleyball coach Linda Taulman and women's basketball coach Sue Buntin have been forced to accept a three-month summer vacation this year in Hawaii. Both coaches argued violently against this burdensome arrangement, arguing forcefully that "who would want to leave this lovely vacation spa where we're already located?"

As punishment for their crimes of winning too many volleyball and women's basketball games, Taulman and Buntin will have to sit on Waikiki Beach for seven consecutive afternoons and watch re-runs of Rip Taylor comedy skits from the "Tonite" show. Moreover, they will be limited to only four meals per day and will be subjected to a 5 a.m. curfew.

For his success in establishing the women's basketball program, and his subsequent success in assisting the men's basketball program while heading the men's and women's track programs, Dave Smith will be given additional duties to prevent him from dying of boredom: head coach of badminton, water polo, tiddlywinks, underwater basket weaving, marbles, jacks, ping pong, sky diving (from the chapel towers), swimming, checkers, chess, gin rummy and Russian roulette.

Lastly, head trainer Brad Smith will be honored for his expertise in driving the Puma team bus throughout the difficult winter of '79. In special recognition of his performance last Dec. 2 in hauling the men's and women's basketball teams to Grace College over a glaze of ice, he will receive the Cale Yarborough-Donnie Allison Safe Driving Award. The award will be presented by Howard Cosell this June at the Humble Howard Ego Symposium in Bulls Gap, Tenn.

Spartans Cower Before SJC Power

By CAPTAIN VIDEO
(only foolin')

Due to a mixup in the 1978-79 Puma basketball schedule this past season, causing our team to end up playing in the National Collegiate Athletic Association Division II playoffs instead of Division I, officials for the NCAA have set up a match for the title to be played at our very own Alumni Fieldhouse on Saturday night.

Battling for the championship in the newly-named No-Name College Amateur Athletics (NCAA II) will be the reigning NCAA I champs, the Michigan State University Spartans, and our very own, lovable Saint Joseph's College Pumas.

Both head coaches agree that this game should prove to be a boring, if not outright laughable, contest. According to Puma head coach George "Wily" Waggoner, "I can't believe how bad a mistake the NCAA I officials have made by making MSU play us. At least they could have made us play against a team with our own power and scoring ability—someone like the Chicago Bulls, perhaps. I just hope the Spartans are good losers."

Michigan State head coach Jud Heathcote had this to say in his behalf, "I must admit that we're really afraid of these Pumas. I really don't think that the Spartans can even match up to them. I just hope that I'm a good loser."

Michigan State will be represented by this somewhat-talented group of players with the likely names of Earvin "Magic" Johnson, Gregory Kelser (also known as the Magic Man's pretty assistant), Ron Charles, Jay Vincent, Terry Donnelly, Mike Brkovich, and Shoes Huffman.

Opposing this group will be Puma stars Dave Downey, Kevin Sims, Tony Smith, Jim Michels, Dennis Thomas, and the two newly-acquired cast-offs from Indiana State, Larry "Look ma, no wings!" Bird, and Carl Nicks.

Madison Square Garden in New York City will be the final destination for the victor of this championship, where the team will await to play the NBA World Champion for the coveted Golden Peanut Award to be presented by President Jimmy Carter.

In the consolation game of the NCAA II Championship, the losers will play such no-name notables as Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, Kent Benson, John Havlicek, Pistol Pete Maravich, and Willis Reed, to be led by head coach Tommy Heinsohn and assistant Bill Hodges (formerly of ISU). This game is scheduled to be played in the Peoria Civic Fieldhouse on Friday, Apr. 13.

Students are reminded that tickets for the Puma/Spartan matchup will be on sale tomorrow at lunch and dinner for only $24.95 and a player to be named later. So, COME ON DOWN!

When you have an official state historical site on your campus, you better take advantage of it. That's why Drexel Hall has been moved onto the open area immediately north of Justin Hall, where SNUFF photographer Donn Proctor says it will serve as a temporary rest area for students trying to make it back to Gallagher, Halas and Justin Halls following overindulgence at recycled meals in the cafeteria.

SJC coach Knute Rockne states that, "We've tried to beef up our offensive and defensive interior lines by recruiting both prime rib from Texas and porterhouse from Kansas City, but the effort hasn't been successful. Now, however, we feel we've found the answer by porking up our interior line with this three-foot six-inch, 300-pound blockbuster."

IM Offers Fun N' Games

By ALFRED E. NEUMAN
(only foolin')

In an effort to increase college enrollment and heighten student participation and activity, the intramural program will undergo a complete overhaul in preparation for the 1979-80 academic year.

All present IM sports will be dropped from the program by recommendation of the Athletic Committee at the last Senate meeting. In addition to the complete program revision, Saint Joseph's has hired Ilie "Nasty" Nastase as its full-time intramural director.

Proposed intramural activities formulated by the athletic committee and submitted for student approval include:

Beer Bottle Toss: Teams consist of three individuals who see how far, in total, they can heave a beer bottle. There will be divisions and classes for both empty and full bottles as well as for 12-ounces and quart-size bottles.

Cannabis Climbing: An individual sport in which the participants compete to see who can get the highest, the quickest. Each person is given two papers and other necessary equipment, but must supply his/her own "brand".

The Drexel Demolition Derby: An annual event in which teams of up to 15 people compete in an effort to come up with various vandalism techniques. Prizes will be awarded on the basis of creativity, physical exertion required of the participants, and total dollar amounts of destruction. First prize will be $1,000.

Water Polo: To be held at the Rensselaer Central High School pool, teams of six will play five-minute quarters while riding Shetland ponies bareback.

Frisbee Bowling: Played in much the same manner as the traditional form of the game with slight modifications. Students will stand at one end of the hallway and wing a frisbee down toward ten faculty members, scoring a point for each one they can scatter.

Alcohol Crisis Creates Panic

By DONALD DUCK
(only foolin')

"The alcohol problem on campus is definitely critical at this time, and we intend to implement steps to correct the situation before it worsens," announced director of discipline Father James Froelich today in an exclusive SNUFF interview.

"There's no doubt about it," says Father Froelich, "the availability of alcohol, especially beer, has become a real crisis. We just can't get enough to supply the campus' needs. I could not get my hands on a full case of Miller's right now if my life depended on it."

Father Froelich feels that the repercussions of the alcohol shortage are already apparent throughout campus, as evidenced by the rapid deterioration of social life. "Everyone knows that the key to weekends at Saint Joe is beer, and when everyone showed up at the mixer Saturday night fully expecting to get smashed out of their minds, the news of the lack of beer was more than some students could take.

The resignation of Jim Novak as director of campus food service was a direct result of the alcohol shortage. Novak said he could no longer keep up with the demands of the stoned students. "We just couldn't make enough cookies and brownies to fill those munched-out kids," says Novak. "Why, the food budget was blown within a week!"

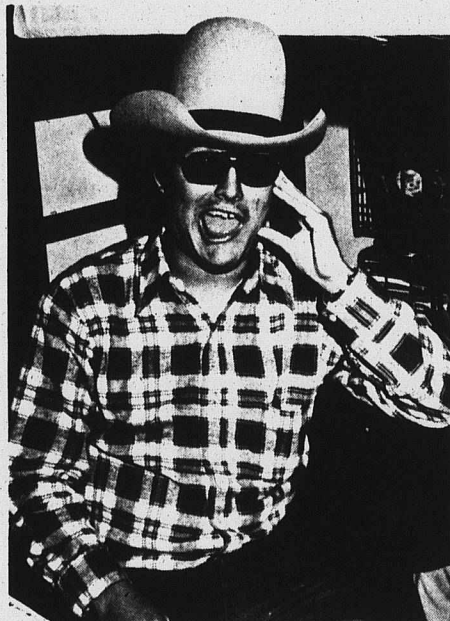

Novak will assume a managerial position with the janitorial department. He feels that his new position will give him a much-deserved rest, for there is very little garbage to pick up any more since the students eat everything in sight.

Saint Joseph's financial situation is also taking a reversal due to the lack of noisy, raucous beer blasts, for it seems that dorm damage is the lowest it's been in years.

To meet the crisis, Father Froelich plans to establish an alcohol emergency center in the Halleck Center ballroom, under the auspices of the new Halleck Center Student Union Board. The board will coordinate pooling of available supplies and insure equal distribution to all dorms.

"We may have to ration for a while," says Froelich.

What kind of man reads SNUFF? He's an up-and-coming young cartoonist, beloved across campus for his witticisms, both verbal and on paper. He's Saint Joseph's answer to the Rhinestone Cowboy. He's got more pizzazz than the Lone Ranger and Tonto combined. He can ride a horse, a mule or an Australian wallaby and never tell the difference. He even totes a ten-gallon strawberry-picking hat purchased for a song, a dilapidated outhouse door and three toadskins from a nearsighted Yugoslavian banana salesman. Yes, fans, he's none other than Len "Hoss" Kohl, SNUFF's beloved cartoonist.

What happens when you study too much? We don't have to tell you, fellow Pumas—just look at what an excessive three-minute study session did to Dave Townsend (so-Gal.). "I knew I should have stopped after two minutes; anyway, my overzealous study habits cost me the opening commercial before the Gong Show," he sadly relates.

Chicken Galore Coming

(only foolin')

Food service director Jim Novak recently announced his plans for retirement with the conclusion of the 1978-79 school year.

Novak has been noted over the years for his excellent service in the planning of well-balanced student meals such as spaghetti and potatoes.

Of all the applicants, Father Banet has narrowed the selection down to four people, all with points in their favor. They are Colonel Sanders, Ronald McDonald, Julia Child and Burger Chef.

FR. BANET

Burger Chef is almost surely out since he requires that his friend Jeff accompany him if he should get the position. Banet says this would be almost impossible since we have to feed the students, and the money which would be necessary to pay Jeff would have to literally come out of the students' mouths.

Banet would like to hire Miss Child, but believes her gourmet meals would be too much for the students to consume after eating Novak's down-to-earth delicacies.

Egg McMuffins are not what the student body wants for breakfast, according to the Colonel. "What they want is chicken and eggs, or chicken extra crispy over easy or scrambled bar-b-qued chicken. For dinner, they would have a new dish prepared with 18 herbs and spices called chicken a la Banet," says Sanders.

Rumor has it that it is because of this new dish that the colonel is the most likely candidate for the position. We asked Father Banet for his comment on the rumor, but his comment was "No comment."

Barf Bag Lectures Slated

(only foolin')

"Let's bring the real world into the classroom -- no more of this isolated ivory tower approach." That's the theme behind announcements of special guest lectures scheduled for next semester and released today by academic dean Billy Carter.

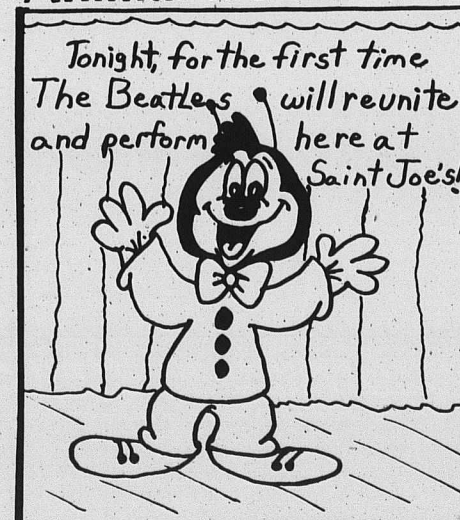

After Carter himself opens the lecture series with "It's Better To Be High Than Dry," subsequent speakers and their topics will be: Richard Nixon, "Democracy Is A Sometimes Thing, And Truth Is What You Make It" — Michael Bilandic, "How To Save Face Graciously" — Jerry Brown, "Running A Multi-Million Dollar State On A Rubber-Band Expense Account" — Donnie and Marie Osmond, "Dental Hygiene Made Simple".

George Steinbrenner — "Buy Your Championships" — Pete Rose, "How To Sit On A Fat Wallet And Never Develop Hemorrhoids" — Lee Marvin, "Cohabitation May Cost You Half Of All You've Got" — Leon Spinks, "All I Want For Christmas Are My Two Front Teeth" — Jimmy Carter, "Don't Knock Peanuts Until You've Tried 'Em" — Foster Brooks, "And You Think I'm Loaded?"

A semester-ending highlight will be a talk by Boris Grummenschidt, personal biographer of Josef Stalin, who will explain Stalin's lifelong philosophy "Don't Die With Enemies; Have Them All Shot Instead."

(the bottom line. . . signed Act. Disciplinary Dean)

Are you lonely? Frustrated? Feeling down in the dumps? Looking for someone to brighten your dreary days and put that pot of gold at the end of your faded little rainbow? Then write me for a bit of sympathetic counsel or a tidbit of humor. Yessir, you'll never be the same once I get done with you.
